Description

This Dan maternity depicts a standing woman with a prominent forehead, carrying a child on her back. Her arms fall to her sides, her drooping breasts evoke the maternal experience, and her peaceful face expresses the quiet strength of the nurturing mother. The verticality of the pose and the sobriety of the volumes reinforce the protective character of this figure, probably used in a domestic or ritual context linked to fertility or the protection of children. The great serenity that emerges from it reflects the spiritual value given to motherhood in the Dan universe.
