Description

Colonial period: very original painting dated 1945, period when France was present in Indochina, signed Barry. This oil on canvas depicts a young monk in meditation before a statue of Buddha, in an atmosphere imbued with contemplation. The work, probably created by a traveling artist, reflects the interest of certain Western painters in the iconography and spiritual traditions of Asia. The palette, dominated by tawny tones and deep reds, lends the scene a particular intensity. The Asian-inspired setting, enriched with a Chinese vase and a hanging adorned with tigers - symbols of strength and protection - contributes to the creation of a mystical atmosphere, where incense burns in light volutes. The treatment of light and color reveals both a Western gaze fascinated by exoticism and
