Description

Majestic and steeped in history, this large Italian armchair in patinated leather, circa 1780, embodies all the prestige of the Louis XIII style. Its generous seat, upholstered in brown leather patinated by time and highlighted with elegant copper braid, evokes the refinement of state salons. The finely turned base and crosspieces brilliantly illustrate the craftsmanship specific to the period, when wood became sculpture. A symbol of distinction during the reign of Louis XIII, the armchair was only intended for figures of power and distinguished guests. The use of leather, then synonymous with luxury and sophistication, reflects the pronounced taste for noble materials and fine finishes. This rare and imposing armchair has spanned the centuries with style, ready to give your interior a touch of
