Description
-------------

India, 1920s/1930s, very pretty and unusual bronze statuette depicting a male character also called a Marapachi doll. Marapachi statuettes are of particular importance in India. Offered by two (the man and the woman), generally as symbolic gifts at weddings, they embody fertility and family happiness. They are generally made of wood and more rarely of bronze in the image of this delightful subject. Good condition except for slight normal wear and tear without impact. Dimension: Height 15 (cm). Beautiful density of the material and therefore a substantial weight of 570 grams before packaging. A certificate of authenticity committing us to the content of this advertisement will be written and given to the buyer. We take particular care with our packaging by using optimal protection.
