Description

"Beautiful Culpeper Type Microscope C.1800"

The circular base of the microscope has in its center an orifice where a plane mirror mounted on an adjustable stirrup is snapped. From this base rise three S-shaped columns which support a shelf also circular. From this shelf extend three other small columns, still S-shaped, they support the body of the microscope in which slides the optical tube. Adjustment of the tube by rack.

Good condition. Identical model collection of scientific instruments of the Louvre Museum. and Microscope Society of London
