Description

Art Deco clock in nickel-plated brass and cage covered with fish skin with its nickel-plated key. The signature on the dial is that of a very large luxury house specializing in the sale of Art Deco objects in the 1930s. The original transport box is made of wood covered with fish skin. There is a missing foot underneath and the hour hand is missing (possibility of small negotiation). The grand sonnerie movement was revised by our watchmaking workshop just before the sale. The operation is guaranteed. The escapement is Swiss anchor with Breguet terminal curve balance spring. All parts are original, there is a reasonable doubt about the minute hand and one of the three remaining feet (the one at the back).
