Description

- Oil on canvas.- With an ecstatic gaze, imbued with a creative spirit, dressed in his work clothes and enveloped in an aura of gray pigments halfway between the experimental and the explosive, the great Milanese artist and engraver paints a self-portrait in his studio. He does not do so from a purely physical perspective, but from one of self-knowledge and spiritual approach, accomplishing the difficult task of grasping his own psychology.- Vico Viganò (1874-1963) was born in the province of Milan and led a solid artistic career in the transition between the 19th and 20th centuries. Although he cultivated painting with remarkable intensity, it was in printmaking that he achieved his greatest recognition, winning prizes that consolidated his prestige in this field. His painting is distinguished
