Description

Pair of designer lamps model Spring by Ingo Maurer 20th century The Spring, often called the "spring" lamp, is a table creation designed in the 1970s-1980s by Ingo Maurer for his studio. Design & materials: It consists of a chrome base in the shape of a helical spring, topped with a white opaline glass globe diffusing a soft light. Typically 32 to 39 cm high, with a diameter of approximately 22-23 cm. In summary / Ingo Maurer, graphic artist turned visionary designer, profoundly reinvented functional lighting by transforming it into a poetic, expressive and experimental work. The Spring Lamp, emblematic of his 70s style, reflects his playful approach: a metal spring carrying a glass globe to create a lively, minimalist and witty lamp.
