Description

RARE museum-quality example of a 19th-century Russian plein-air oil study on canvas, executed with swift, confident brushstrokes by the skilled hand of a masterful artist. The tall figure of a bearded man squinting in the sunlight, fully equipped for long-distance travel, captured by the artist in a moment of brief respite. The expression on his wind and sun-weathered face and the man's pose are remarkably natural and expressive, allowing us to sense the hardships of this character's life path.

This study is an excellent example of Peredvizhniki art, a synthesis of European artistic school traditions and Russian plein-air painting. DETAILS: Artist: Attributed to Vasily Dmitrievich Polenov (1844-1927), Peredvizhniki circle, Russian school Medium: Late 19th century
