Description

Breton-Style Fire Screen - Late 19th Century
From the bedroom of a Breton manor, this solid oak fire screen (height 110 cm, width 70 cm) stands out for its finely carved decoration and its structure with four uprights topped by small turned finials in the shape of acorns. The upper section features an openwork, radiating motif, characteristic of late 19th-century Breton craftsmanship. The front is adorned with a petit point tapestry, depicting a bouquet of flowers delicately framed within an ornamental cartouche. The shaped base (35 cm high) ensures stability, while the central frame (24 cm) highlights the refinement of the embroidery. It once decorated the elegant bedroom of a Breton manor, bringing both refinement and warmth to the interior. Condition note: The tapestry shows
