Specializing in the Biedermeier style, it distinguished itself from the 1830s onwards by its innovative steam-bent wood technique. In 1842, he was invited to Vienna, Austria, by Prince Metternich, where he founded Gebrüder Thonet with his sons. Chair No. 14, created around 1859, revolutionized industrial furniture production with its lightness and ease of assembly. Thonet established itself in European and American cafés. In the 20th century, it adopted tubular steel with the Bauhaus designers.
