Description

OMEGA Seamaster watch in steel from 1975, whose case has a rare so-called "turtle" shape. Very representative of the 70s by its general volume, is also by the matte and shiny contrasts that it presents since the bezel and the case are very finely brushed while all the visible surfaces on the edge of the watch offer a shiny polished surface. Its dial gives a subtle "sunshine" effect. This men's model is a mechanical watch with automatic winding, equipped with a date function. It is "certified chronometer" as indicated on its dial, revealing increased precision. The indexes are added two other graduated measuring scales, on the dial and inside the bezel. The watch is signed, on its dial and its movement, and decorated on its screwed case back with the Seamaster logo and the Ω symbol. In perfect
