Description

Bronze sculpture "Shy Girl" - Early 20th century.

Delightful bronze sculpture depicting a little girl in a shy or pensive pose, her face partially hidden by her raised arm. The figure is characterized by soft and spontaneous modeling, highlighting the sweetness of childhood. She wears a loose dress and a headscarf that accentuate her tender and genuine appearance.

The dark patina, with subtle warm nuances due to age, helps emphasize the intimate and poetic nature of the work. The natural posture and the material treatment suggest the influence of European realist sculpture from the first half of the 20th century.
