Description

Arman or Armand Fernandez (1928-2005) French artist, painter, sculptor and visual artist, known for his series of "accumulation". During his career he met Yves Klein by chance, this meeting would influence his life because a few years later he founded with his collaboration the group of New Realists later joined by César, Mimmo Rotella, Niki de Saint Phalle, Gerard Deschamps... From 1961, Arman developed his career in New York, where he lived and worked half of his time, alternating with his life in Nice until 1967, then in Vence until his death. At the end of 1989, Arman received the Legion of Honor from the hands of President François Mitterrand. This sculpture, "slice of Apollo" in solid bronze is numbered 29/60 and is typical of his work Information and other photos on request
