Description

Remarkable 19th century impressionist canvas which represents the portrait of an elegant young woman whose beauty reflects a certain seriousness... The canvas is not signed but its beautiful quality suggests the presence of an excellent artist who certainly received a solid classical training before evolving towards impressionism: the candidates with this profile are numerous, from the American James Abbott McNeill Whistler to the French Edgar Degas, but here we would think more of artists like Eva Gonzales and especially Édouard Manet of whom we find here some small airs of certain portraits that he made of Berthe Morisot... Note: this is the kind of painting which would deserve serious investigations to try to identify the author, perhaps by searching from the model which can
