Description

A splendid walnut sideboard from the Charles X period (1820), crafted with remarkable artisanal mastery and intended for true connoisseurs. The piece is in excellent condition, with a solid wood top made from a single board and a veneered walnut front. Its large dimensions, 189 x 58 x h109 cm, highlight both its solidity and its timeless beauty.

Quality and value of materials

This sideboard is an authentic example of elegance and durability. Moreover, the choice of walnut as the primary wood ensures long-lasting strength and aesthetic warmth. Therefore, the solid structure and veneered front testify to the meticulous care that cabinetmakers of the time devoted to detail.

The Charles X style is characterized by refined lines and balanced proportions. Indeed, during this historical period, design tended toward sober elegance, capable of merging functionality and decoration. Consequently, this sideboard perfectly embodies these principles, making it suitable for both classic and eclectic interiors.

Versatility and collectible value

This sideboard is not only a functional piece of furniture but also a true functional artwork. In fact, thanks to its harmonious style, it can be integrated into various living spaces without losing its character. Furthermore, it is a collectible piece destined to maintain and increase its value over time. Therefore, choosing this sideboard means making an investment that unites beauty and patrimonial solidity.

A safe and lasting purchase

Today more than ever, the antiques market rewards authentic, certified, and well-preserved furniture. This Charles X sideboard fully meets these standards. It therefore represents a unique opportunity for those who wish to enrich their home or collection with an elegant and meaningful piece. Moreover, its excellent condition minimizes the need for future restorations.
