Description

Superb pitcher-like vase in Murano blown glass, made using the sommerso technique, emblematic of 20th-century Italian glass art. This model seduces with the intensity and transparency of its superimposed colors: a deep red heart, enveloped in successive layers of yellow, blue and clear crystal, creating a striking play of light. The fluid lines and the elegance of the silhouette give this piece a sculptural presence, halfway between utilitarian object and work of art. In very good condition, without chips or cracks. Period: circa 1960-1970. Origin: Murano, Italy. A rare collector's item, ideal for lovers of Italian design and 20th-century glass art.
