Prize at the 1941 Salon, the Prix de la Ville de Paris in 1941, and the Dagnan Bouveret Prize at the 1943 Salon. He painted views of the foggy and laborious North: Rue du Curé in Roubaix (Motte collection), the Port of Roubaix in operation (City of Paris), Rue de la Cloche in Tourcoing (Tourcoing Museum), and Boulevard Gambetta (Roubaix Museum). Beginning in 1932 in Savoie, he painted the region's sunny nature, its villages, and old neighborhoods: Old Shop of Conflans (Albertville Museum), Savoyard Autumn (Douai Museum), Aix-les-Bains, and the Matafan (acquired by the French State in 1938). He was appointed an officer of Public Instruction in 1938. Deaf from birth, he died accidentally in Lyon.
