Description

To occupy your evenings in two passionate gaming sessions, here is a beautiful Louis XVI period tric-trac table in mahogany circled with brass for the exterior and inlaid ebony for the game itself. It has its original pucks, which is not common. The game of tric-trac is no longer practiced because it is too complex, you can play modern versions of backgammon or jaquet. The removable tray which closes the game makes it on one side in original black moleskin (a small lack at the leather edge with the small iron) a flat desk, and on the other covered with green felt a games table for cards. Mounted on casters, it has on each side a long drawer to store cards and pucks. Some little marks of the time but rather original good condition.
