Description

Imposing cast iron square fountain, statue representing Diana of Gabies. On each side of the mascarons from which the water comes out to fall back into a basin in the shape of a basin, on the other two bouquets with the allegory of summer. Period late 19th century. Note that this fountain is the recomposition of two elements (base and statue) coming from a different origin, hence a bronze-colored varnish patina for the statue and a green paint for the base. This model of fountain did exist, it is archived. A small lack of volute on one of the two basins. Probably stamp of DURENNE on the statue
