Description

JAPAN - Meiji period (1868-1912). HIKESHI BANTEN - Japanese firefighter's kimono jacket, made from a thick quilted and stitched cotton fabric (sashiko) intended to be filled with water to protect its wearer from the burns of the flames. It is decorated using the tsutsugaki technique, a freehand reserve dyeing process on an indigo background with various Chinese characters at the nape of the neck, the collar and inside. Very good general condition, slight wear from use in the lower part. Dimensions: 122 x 120 cm.
