Description

This elegant wall clock was created in France around 1880 and is crafted primarily from spelter, mounted on a shaped wooden backplate. The clock is richly decorated with ornamental details and features a finely modelled winged putto, a charming symbol often associated with love and time.

The circular dial displays Roman numerals framed in cartouches, with ornate gilded hands that enhance its refined character. The case is adorned with intricate relief work, reflecting the decorative taste of late 19th-century French craftsmanship.
