Description

Louis-Philippe walnut bedside table, late 19th century. Charming little Louis-Philippe bedside table made of walnut. It has a sober and elegant line, typical of this period, with a drawer at the top and a door on the front opening onto a storage space. The drawer slides perfectly, making this piece immediately ready for use. The top is made of wood. The grain of the walnut is particularly beautiful, the patina warm. The discreet moldings highlight the quality work and the know-how of the cabinetmaker. The furniture rests on a molded base and sabot feet. This furniture is functional and decorative: ideal as a bedside table, small occasional furniture or even a sofa end. The furniture is in its original condition.
