Description

Oil on cardboard, signed and dated 1909 lower right. This oil on cardboard depicts an Algerian coastal scene structured in two distinct planes: a bright sky and a calm sea in the upper section, contrasted with dense vegetation in the foreground. The application of paint, with thick and visible strokes, reveals a modern and bold approach for its time. The deliberately free rendering of forms emphasizes this innovative character, far removed from traditional academicism. This work illustrates Carré's transition towards a more contemporary pictorial expression, already affirmed upon his settlement in Algeria. A French painter and illustrator, Léon Carré trained at the École des Beaux-Arts in Paris under Léon Bonnat and Luc-Olivier Merson. Winner of the prestigious Villa
