Description

This oval mirror made of braided rope and leather was created by Adrien Audoux and Frida Minet, a French design duo active in the 1950s. Their work is characterized by the use of natural materials such as hemp or sisal rope, creating handcrafted pieces with a rustic and maritime style. These mirrors are particularly sought after by collectors of mid-century French design and lovers of coastal or bohemian decor. The value of these pieces has increased considerably in recent years due to their timeless aesthetic, their artisanal manufacture, and their relative rarity on the antique market.
