Description

George VI period clock in gilt and patinated bronze. Taking up the architectural form of a church, called a Cathedral clock. It features the characteristic elements, pinnacles, brackets or pointed arches. Two figures on the front, on the left representing youth with a long-haired woman, on the right a bearded old man's head for middle age. Domed glass on the front, silver dial and blued steel hands. Roman numerals for the hours, railway for the minutes. Signed Button & Son - Wakefield. Typical English mechanism with weekly winding, fusee-chain system. No chime. Glass door at the back for access to the mechanism. This clock is revised, works. With key and pendulum. We are at your disposal for any request, please contact us by phone (06 01 49 14 24) or by email (remarot@gmail.com).
