Description

From the former library of Alberto Bruni Tedesco in Turin. He was the father of Carla Bruni. The extremely finely carved figures exhibit a refined elegance and appear to be in motion. They are partly endowed with attributes and dressed in long togas. There is an old large-format slide of the library on which the figures can be seen. It is possibly a Roman work from the late 18th century. Three of the figures were probably added in the 19th century to complete the library's furnishings.
