Description

Finely carved Swiss pine wood sculpture depicting a cherub holding a bunch of grapes, an allegorical reference to the cult of Bacchus. The elegant design of covering the cherub's naked body with a drape held by a cord over the shoulder and anatomically well-structured, is evident. The cherub rests on a faux rocky terrain, reminiscent of Roman Baroque. The carving, likely of Northern Italian origin, dates to around the mid-18th century. The work is 72 cm tall. A certificate of authenticity is included with the sale.
