Description

Large bust of beautiful quality in painted plaster imitation bronze with excavation patina representing the Charioteer of Delphi Hêniokhos (the one who holds the reins) one of the most famous sculptures of Ancient Greece discovered in 1896. The original statue is in the Archaeology Museum of Delphi. Some lacks in the painting which reinforces the antique side, otherwise very good condition, no breakage or re-gluing. Reproduction of beautiful quality dating from the middle of the 20th century, very decorative and of good size.
