Description

OMEGA Constellation watch in steel from the 1970s, with a rectangular "tonneau" shaped case. Very representative of the 70s in its overall volume, it is also so in the matte and shiny contrasts it presents since the case, on the top and on the edge, as well as the case back, are very finely brushed, while two chamfered facets arranged between the bezel and the edge offer a shiny polished surface. These chamfers visually soften the beautiful volume of the case. The absence of lugs gives this watch a refined design. Its generally squarer dial also evokes the softer "television" format, very representative of the 70s, and presents the same color and finish as the case in a uniform rendering. The black indexes stand out and punctuate the contour of the dial while the two-tone hands offer a subtle reminder
