Description

Serving trolley - Art Deco style / Maison Jansen, circa 1940-1950. Elegant serving trolley in brass and blackened wood, with two circular glass tops. Its sober and functional design, combined with noble materials, evokes the creations of great Parisian decoration houses such as Maison Jansen or Dominique, often intended for luxury hotels and grand restaurants of the time. The delicately worked brass base ends with original swivel castors, allowing great maneuverability. The gilt bronze rings and joints add a touch of refinement. The blackened wooden structure, combined with the transparent glasses, creates an elegant contrast typical of the late Art Deco style, between classicism and modernity. This type of rolling table was commonly used for serving wines, cheeses or desserts, in palaces, private mansions
