Description

Magnificent portrait of a young boy with blue eyes, executed in the 19th century, under the Second Empire (Napoleon III). This work is distinguished by the exceptional quality of its execution and the expressive force of the gaze. The young model, slightly turned towards the light, exudes a natural nobility and a purity of expression that instantly captivates the viewer. The pictorial mastery is remarkable: subtle modeling of the skin tone, delicate work of volumes, and a sober and luminous palette typical of academic portraits of the great French tradition of the 19th century. The composition, both simple and majestic, highlights the personality of the child in an atmosphere marked by gentleness and contemplation.
