Description

Gothic dresser with cut sides - Extremely rare piece of furniture" Superb Gothic dresser, of great quality of composition and remarkable rarity. The upper body is composed of five sculpted panels framing a central door. Under this body, a suspended drawer - called a yette - completes the whole. On each side, two uprights end in fleurons, while the belt of the piece of furniture The lower part is more sober, resting on a hexagonal base The panels have a rich flamboyant Gothic decoration: orbevoie fenestration with deep sculptures, with intertwined arches and ribs forming bellows and snuffers in an elegant undulating movement. These motifs are found on each panel, as well as on the surrounding frieze. This type of furniture is extremely rare, especially in such a state of
