Joan PONÇ (1927-1984)Joan Ponç was a Catalan surrealist painter. He emerged in the 1940s as one of the founding figures of the post-Civil War avant-garde revival in Spain, co-founding with Antoni Tàpies and Joan Brossa the journal Dau al Set, a crucible of Surrealism and magical thinking in Catalonia. His work -- populated by nocturnal creatures, metaphysical landscapes and demonic figures born of visceral automatism -- probes the darkest recesses of human experience with a formal freedom that set him apart from any school or movement. A voluntary exile in Brazil from 1953 to 1962, and later settled in Cadaquès, Spain, he gradually turned towards geometry and science, developing a miniaturist precision akin to that of an illuminator, made all the more intense by advanced diabetes that threatened his sight. He died in Saint-Paul-de-Vence on 4 April 1984, leaving behind a body of work as unclassifiable as it is visionary.
