Description

A veritable column of light, this exceptional piece embodies the quintessence of mid-20th century Venetian lagoon craftsmanship. The dialogue between the solid crystal and the generous inclusions of gold flakes creates a chromatic vibration of rare intensity, characteristic of the Rugiadoso technique. The architectural silhouette, punctuated by a succession of eleven gadrooned and tapered sleeves, ends in a majestic corolla that magnifies the diffusion of light. Its sculptural presence and golden patina make it a historic milestone in prestigious Italian design. The gallery owner's advice: This monumental light fixture is the ideal piece for an architect's office project seeking to punctuate a reception area with high ceilings. For a striking contrast, it will fit perfectly into a Minimalist Chic interior or alongside a Scandinavian rosewood sideboard, where its brilliance will warm the sober lines of Nordic furniture. Its imposing stature also allows it to be used as a focal point in a Hollywood Regency-style living room, adding a touch of erudition and elegance. Materials: mouth-blown Murano crystal, internal inclusions of 24-karat fine gold, internal structure and connecting rings in gilded brass. Museum-quality condition; the crystal has no chips, cracks, or restorations.
