Description

Portrait of John Hookham Frere, 1792 Oil on canvas signed and dated 1792, depicting the British diplomat John Hookham Frere. This refined portrait, executed by the English artist GP Barbier, elegantly illustrates the neoclassical taste of the late 18th century. The model, dressed in a midnight blue coat and white tie, is depicted with great psychological finesse and careful execution, typical of English portraits of this period. Two old labels are glued to the back of the painting on the stretcher. The first reads: "Rt. Hon. John Hookham Frere: born May 1769 married Eliz. Jemima countess of Errol. 1816. Died Jan.1846. Painted by Barbier in 1792". The second label reads: "Charles comte de Fourier Villers Seigneur de Giremont en Lorraine chevalier de Saint Louis ancien capitaine de cavalerie né 1758".

About the sitter - John Hookham Frere (1769-1846) British diplomat and politician, John Hookham Frere was an influential figure of the late 18th and early 19th centuries. Educated at Eton and Cambridge, he made a career in the Foreign Office and was successively sent to Portugal and then to Spain. A friend of the future Prime Minister George Canning, he played an important diplomatic role during the Napoleonic Wars. In 1816 he married Elizabeth Jemima, widowed Countess of Erroll. A scholar and humanist, he retired to Malta in 1820, where he devoted himself to translating Greek classics, notably Aristophanes, becoming one of the first English translators of the ancient author. He died in Pietà, on the island, and is buried in the Msida Bastion Cemetery.
