Description

Charming portrait of a young woman waiting, depicting a moving scene of the "return from fishing." Produced at the end of the 19th century, this oil on canvas is distinguished by the finesse of the touch and the delicacy of its execution. Immerse yourself in the gentle melancholy of this highly sensitive work: a young girl seated, her gaze lost in thought, holding a fishing net in her hands. The warm tones and subtle light highlight the softness of her face and the texture of the fabric, revealing the expertise of an artist deeply attentive to the poetry of everyday life. The sober background highlights the main figure and accentuates the emotion emanating from the scene, evoking both the patience and tenderness of the moments of waiting linked to maritime life at the time. This work is not signed.
