Width : 8 cm

Height : 22 cm

Description

Kwoma pottery used in a fertility cult related to the yam harvest and used as a ceremonial flute.

The shape of this pottery is reminiscent of the yam itself, a sacred tuber. This engraved terracotta flute produces a very good sound and is sold with a presentation stand. Collected in the Washkuk hills area in Papua New Guinea.

Approx. 22 x 8 cm / EUR250 including stand and shipping.
