Description

This elegant terracotta animal sculpture, created in the 20th century in the Art Deco style, depicts two panthers in a scene imbued with both gentleness and restrained power. One is reclining, the other striding forward gracefully, their muzzles brushing against each other in an intimate and natural gesture. Signed A. Pollin on the base, this work demonstrates a remarkable sense of observation and great mastery of modeling. The clean lines, balanced volumes, and refined stylization are characteristic of the Art Deco aesthetic, combining decorative elegance and animal dynamism. The understated patina highlights the powerful and graceful forms of these felines, true emblems of strength and refinement.
