Description

Very large fireplace screen in solid rosewood from the Restoration period. This is most likely a piece of furniture of English origin. The dimensions are unusual (149 cm high) for a wooden fireplace screen. The structure is very richly carved in the mass with a profusion of decorations, palmettes, scrolls, acanthus leaves, flowers... The central part is a petit point tapestry with an orientalist scene, an Arab rider and a man on a dromedary. This tapestry, which is in good condition, is protected by a glass. This fireplace screen can also be used as a screen as the dimensions are large. Good condition of house, some re-gluing in the wood. Period early 19th century around 1830.
