Description

Full plate daguerreotype of a man of quality. In its period frame in blackened wood, Napoleon III style. The daguerreotype is the first photographic process developed by Nicéphore Niépce then Louis Daguerre and offered to the whole world (except the United Kingdom) by France in 1839. It is both a negative and a positive, hence this characteristic mirror effect. They were also poetically called in the 19th century "mirrors that remember".
