Description

Large gilded wooden torch holder from the 17th century. Composed of 3 superimposed elements connected by a central axis, it rests on a very stable tripod structure. It ends with a circular platform 26 cm in diameter. The sculpture is very deep, in the Baroque style with leafy representations adorning the base and the shaft. Formerly transformed into a lamppost, it has retained its threaded stem, the electric cable passing through its axis. It can therefore easily be used again as a lamppost or treated as a torch holder in its original state. Beautiful gilding of the period, no notable lack. Italy, 17th century.
