Description

Japanese Satsuma earthenware figure group of Hotei and karako, late Meiji period, circa 1890.

The monk's teal robe lies over a finely crackled glaze; he holds an ogi in the right hand and the strap of his treasure sack in the left. The child plays a den-den daiko bearing a tomoe emblem. The white "sack" base carries auspicious coral, coins and a lantern.

This composition impresses with professional, expensive-quality workmanship; every detail is rendered with fantastic precision and realism.

Collectors' note: a high-grade Kyoto-Satsuma piece distinguished by refined modelling and enamel work -- a desirable display object for focused Satsuma
