Jean Ederne Allié (20th century) L'Embellie -- Ink and red chalk highlights on paper, 100 x 70 cm, signed and dated 1983 A writer above all, Jean Edern Hallier transposes into drawing the same passion that he put into his words. L'Embellie testifies to a free, almost calligraphic gesture, where the line seems to write the body more than it describes it. The feminine figures, supple and undulating, stand out with a spontaneous elegance: the black ink traces, the red chalk brushes, and from this dialogue is born a singular vibration, both sensual and modest. This is not the work of an academic painter, but of an author who, through his lines,
