Description

Small walnut chest, solidly built and richly adorned with wrought-iron fittings, including long lance-shaped straps and decorative studs, many of them pierced or engraved with cross motifs. These features suggest an original clerical or monastic use, possibly as a sacristy chest or ecclesiastical storage coffer. Date: late 16th - early 17th century Materials: solid walnut and wrought iron Dimensions: width 92 cm height 58 cm maximum depth at feet 48 cm Condition and restorations: The main structure is original, retaining its antique patina and surface wear. Some parts were replaced over time: one board of the bottom and, most likely, the lid, renewed in the 19th century; the hinges are modern. The feet show old reworkings, probably from the 19th century, consistent with the overall
