Description

A stunning pair of decorative shell-encrusted table lamps with distinctive, artistically designed bases, designed by Anthony Redmile in the 1970s. The bases are rectangular and densely covered with several types of natural shells, giving them a rich, textured, and organic appearance. The shells are arranged in a compact, structured pattern, predominantly in earthy beige and brown tones, reinforcing the naturalistic aesthetic. At the center of each base is a metal medallion depicting a Neptune's head, a classic and bold design that adds a majestic and dramatic touch. The Greek god's heads contrast with the shell background and are surrounded by rock crystals. Designer and artist Anthony Redmile is known for his shell and faux taxidermy creations from the 1970s. These lamps are strong, original
