Description

LXV style broken duchess The set consists of two independent armchairs and a low central element serving as a junction, forming a long and sinuous seat, designed for rest and conversation. This broken duchess combines classic elegance and contemporary comfort. It retains the original function - allowing a semi-reclining position - while adapting to 20th century domestic use. This object thus illustrates the taste for neo-Louis XV furniture, very present in the bourgeois interiors of this period.
