Description

Walnut cathedral chair, also known as a high-back chair, dating from the late 17th or early 18th century. This ceremonial furniture piece is typical of the period. The central panel of the backrest features a finely carved rosette of Gothic inspiration, framed by floral motifs and vertical ogival tracery. It is surmounted by a stylized vegetal frieze, characteristic of late Louis XIII or transitional Louis XIV ornamentation. The overall decoration, while restrained, shows precise and balanced execution, testifying to quality craftsmanship. The rectangular seat opens to reveal an integrated storage chest (during this period most commonly used for storing liturgical objects or books). The piece displays a handsome brown patina. It has undergone routine restoration. The top cornice and bottom panel are later
