Description

Desk attributed to Krass from the Art Deco period. The line offers all its modernity. The protruding shape of the box and the jambs of the line of the top offer a modernist empty border. This protruding top is as if placed on the frame. The leather is framed by the Rio rosewood veneer. The lacquered door, the mastery of the different materials and the shape reveal the unique know-how of this cabinetmaker. The whole is contrasted by the chrome crotch. The thin spinning top feet add even more lightness. The hidden hanging drawers offer functionality and precision. The good depth facilitates a space adapted to its short length. The four visible sides make it ideal for a middle of the room. The set combines aesthetics, good storage and rarity.
