Description

Four bookcases and three tables from the University of Padua made in the first half of the 1900s. Ideal for shop or showroom furnishings. The bookcases each have two doors, with large glass windows and shelves mounted on ladders for height adjustment. The tables rest on column legs with Louis XVI-style fluting and are equipped with a large drawer. New lacquer finish, white on the outside and antique rose on the inside. The tables are the same color, with pink on the edge of the top and on the leg grooves. The display cases are of different sizes: two are 210 cm wide and the other two are 188 cm wide. The height and depth are the same for all. The bookcases are a single piece; only the doors and shelves can be removed. A film is applied to the glass to prevent injuries from cuts if the glass breaks. Internal
